EXPLANATORY NOTE

The World Health Organization (WHO) has identified dental caries (tooth decay) and periodontal diseases (gum diseases) as the two (2) most common oral health issues affecting Filipinos. Fluoride deficiency weakens tooth enamel, making teeth more prone to decay, and cavities can be substantially reduced with proper care. Untreated cavities in children can cause pain and infections that may lead to problems with their activities, poor school performance, and overall development. Prevention of dental decay and basic oral care should be a priority in integrated health promotion programs and feeding strategies to enhance the well-being of Filipinos. The Local Government Unit of Carmen, Surigao del Sur, aims to assist children, especially those in Child Development Centers, who struggle to focus on their education due to poor oral health, by providing them with free fluoride treatment.
